Bill Sells To Head Toastmasters

Torrance Mid-Day Toastmasters No. 1274 installed new officers at an installation dinner held Saturday night at the YMCA.

Deputy Governor G. S. Evans installed the following officers: William Sells, president; W. R. Inman, vice president; F. A. Young, secretary; J. Berg, treasurer; J. A. Willd, sergeant at arms.

Out-going officers were: R. A. Owens, president; William Sells, vice president; W. R. Inman, secretary; F. A. Young, treasurer; S. T. Wagner, sergeant at arms. T. G. Wilkes spoke on "Caribbean Cruise."

Smog . . .

"Where smog is concerned, our house is clean."

A. E. Thompson, manager of General Petroleum's Torrance refinery made this statement in response to questions on whether his huge plant was a "major source" of smog.

"We hear a lot these days about gasoline vapors being the primary cause of smog. Everyone of our processes at Torrance is air-tight." In reference to a recent survey made when new storage rules were issued, Thompson said,

"We found that 99.73 per cent of our volatile materials were being stored in suitable tanks."

Inventor
While Los Angeles and vicinity are desperately upset over the smog issue, a Torrance resident is equally upset but for a different reason. He claims to have invented the only effective smog-control system in North America, yet has a most trying time getting a fair hearing of his idea.

Victor Constantine, nearly 65, of 2307 Border ave., speaks with unabated fervor of his invention which he explains as a spraying system which completely disintegrates the smog and poison gases.

He is willing to offer the smog device free for the sake of proving his point to the first Torrance factory which will install it.

Had Stove
Constantine, all wrapped up in wonder and conviction, described the curious history of his discovery. While a co-owner of a restaurant in Swift Current, Canada, he was constantly plagued by a stove which released unbearable fumes. When Constantine could not stand it any longer, he began a "stove-control" campaign. His experiments led to a "fume-proof" system.

Years later, when he came to Los Angeles he happened to be riding in a street car thinking about the many smog complaints he had read about lately. "Suddenly," Constantine stated, "I snapped up in my seat and struck my head with my hand. The people who saw me thought I was crazy. But I had suddenly thought again of the similarity between the problem here and my problem in Canada and I felt that I was the only one in North America who knew the answer."

Constantine, who has had his invention patented, said he could be reached at FA. 8-1857.

He said that industrial waste products, like human waste products, must and can be properly disposed of.

His method would cost only about $500, considerably lower than other installations. Some industries which he has approached have considered his invention thoughtfully, he said, but had already installed another.

Constantine was bitter about one thing however. He has been trying to speak to Gordon P. Larson of the County Air Pollution Board and the County Board of Supervisors. He was given exactly three minutes to state his case, along with everyone else, at a recent public hearing. This he considered an insult to his position as an inventor, asking the Board how he could possibly be expected to present a technical case in that short a period of time.

Drowning . . .

son Hizar, 17, son of Mrs. M. E. Wagner of 2020 W. Lomita Blvd., Lomita.

The boys, out for a drive, got to the reservoir by crawling under two 10-foot-high chain link fences, it was reported. As they were walking along the sloped edge, Hizar's feet slipped and he plunged into the depths.

Hopper dived to his aid but both were pulled under by the current created from a near-by spillway. Their bodies were recovered with the aid of grappling hooks brought by deputy sheriffs summoned by companions.
